Slightly Unconventional Floor Plan With Flexibility

The downstairs floor was added creating wonderful space but not a cookie cutter floor plan. The most likely use would be to use the family room as expected with a private bedroom off of it. If desired, the bedroom door could be potentially relocated to the hall but at a slight loss of the "private ambience" but enabling the family room to be a huge guest or master suite.

The addition of the stairs to reach the bottom floor led to the removal of the closet from the office. A closet could be added to the 12' long office to re-enable its use as a bedroom.

The kitchen and all bathrooms have been beautifully remodeled. All floors are either wood or tile. The home is surrounded by patios and a large balcony providing various outdoor living space with both sun and shade whenever the sun is up.
